RSV Unveils Details for New Black Pearl on the Columbia Restaurant

VANCOUVER, Wash. – Today, RSV Building Solutions, a Vancouver-based construction company that specializes in restaurant remodeling and construction, released the final architectural renderings for the new Black Pearl on the Columbia restaurant. Additionally, the restaurant management announced the hiring of its Executive Chef Michael Fry.

“We are extremely excited to showcase just how amazing the Black Pearl on the Columbia will be,” said Ron Frederiksen, president of RSV Building Solutions. “This restaurant is sure to be a new icon for the region and we are pleased with how quickly work is progressing.”

RSV recently completed all the needed site preparation work and has begun pouring concrete. In the coming weeks, the Black Pearl on the Columbia’s structure will begin to take shape as structural steel is erected.

“I could not be more pleased with how RSV has been handling this project,” said Black Pearl on the Columbia general manager and project manager Russell Brent. “The people at RSV are not only fantastic construction professionals, but they are always looking to create as much value for us as possible.”

Additionally, the Black Pearl on the Columbia recently hired Michael Fry as its executive chef. Fry will oversee the entire kitchen operations, which include menu development, recipe development, and kitchen management.

Prior to joining the Black Pearl on the Columbia, Fry worked for Pacific Coast Restaurants where he opened other local restaurants as executive chef including Portland City Grill, Portland Steak & Chop House, Stanfords, and Newport Bay. In total, Fry has accumulated nearly 30 years of restaurant experience.

The architect for the project is Jeff Lightheart of Architects Associative.
